COURT OF COMMON PLEAS CO. OF WORCESTER, MASS. VOL 2 PET. NO. 4 0 0

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas, begun and holden at Worcester within and for the County of Worcester, on the first Monday of September in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty six

Respectfully represents Christopher Lovett

of Worcester in the County of Worcester, an alien and free white person that he was born at Dingle in the County of Kerry in Ireland on or about the first day of November in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty three, and is now about twenty two years of age; that he arrived at Boston in the State of Massachusetts, in the United States of America, on or about the fifteenth day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty eight; that it is his bona fide intention to become a Citizen of the United States of America, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign Prince, Potentate, State, and Sovereignty, whatever, and particularly to Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, whose subject he has heretofore been: that such has been his bona fide intention for three years last past, and that he was a minor at the time he arrived in the United States, and resided therein three years next preceding his arrival at the age of twenty one years.

And said petitioner further represents, that he has ever since continued to reside within the jurisdiction of said United States, to wit: in New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut and in Worcester aforesaid the last four years

that he has never borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of Nobility; that he is ready to renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign Prince, Potentate, State, or Sovereignty, whatsoever and particularly to the said Victoria, Queen

as aforesaid, whose subject he has heretofore been; that he is attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same:

Wherefore, said Petitioner prays, that he may be admitted to become a Citizen of the said United States of America, according to the forms of the Statutes in such case made and provided.

Christopher his X mark Lovett

WORCESTER, SS. Court of Common Pleas, September fourth 1856.

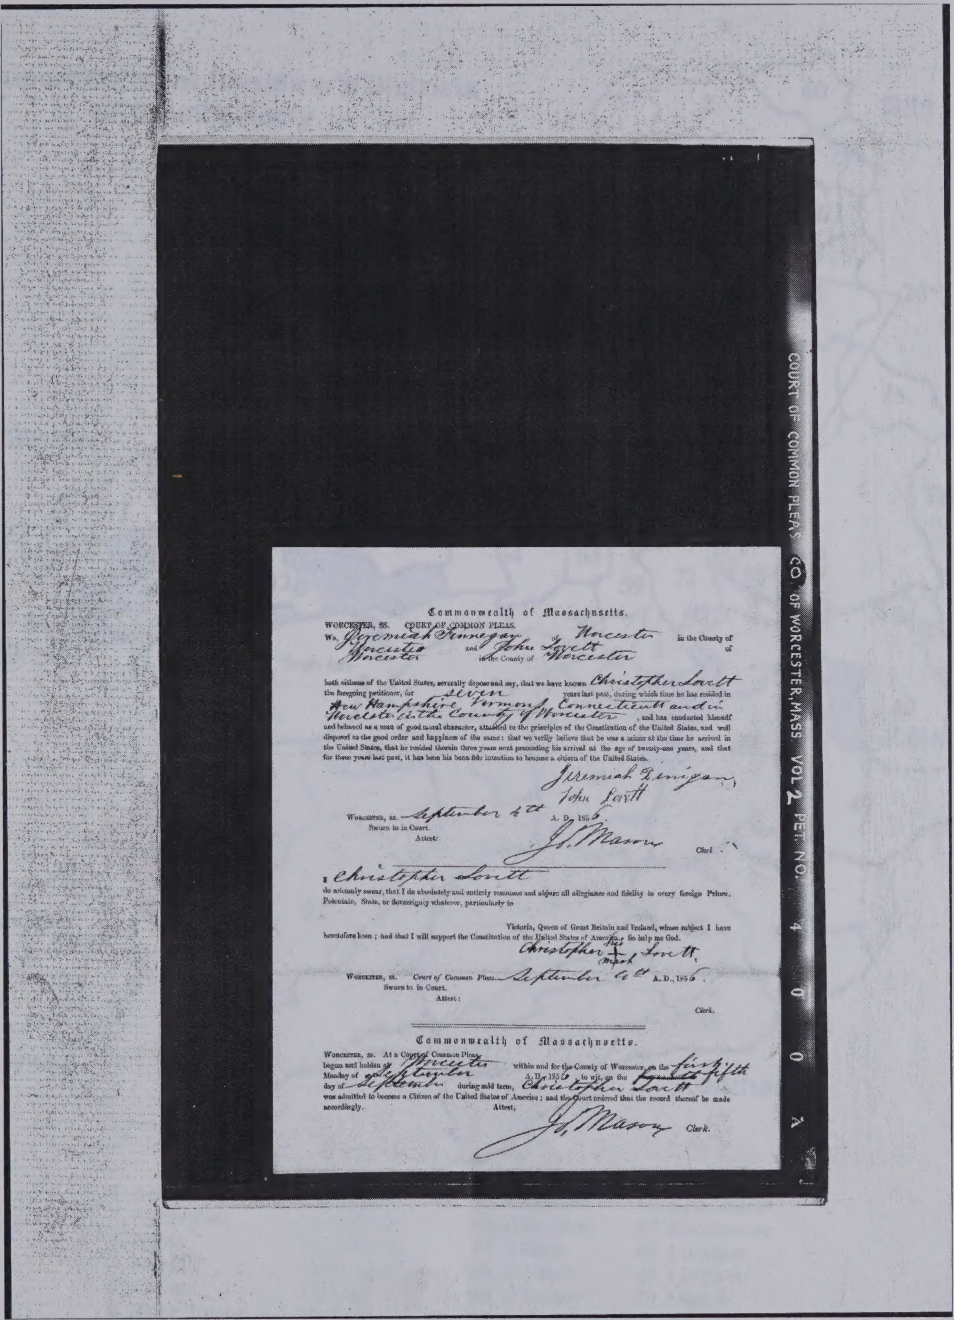
Then the said Christopher Lovett personally appeared before said Court, and made oath to the truth of said facts as set forth in the above Declaration to the Court, by him subscribed.

ATTEST,

J. S. Mason Clerk.



COURT OF COMMON PLEAS CO. OF WORCESTER, MASS VOL 2 PET. NO. 4 0 0 A

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, SS. COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

We, Jeremiah Fennegan of Worcester in the County of Worcester and John Lovett of Worcester in the County of Worcester both citizens of the United States, severally depose and say, that we have known Christopher Lovett the foregoing petitioner, for seven years last past, during which time he has resided in New Hampshire Vermont, Connecticut and in Worcester in the County of Worcester, and has conducted himself and behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same: that we verily believe that he was a minor at the time he arrived in the United States, that he resided therein three years next preceeding his arrival at the age of twenty-one years, and that for three years last past, it has been his bona fide intention to become a citizen of the United States.

Jeremiah Dinigan
John Lovett

WORCESTER, ss. September 4th A. D. 1856.
Sworn to in Court.
Attest: J. S. Mason Clerk.

I Christopher Lovett do solemnly swear, that I do absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign Prince, Potentate, State, or Sovereignty whatever, particularly to Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, whose subject I have heretofore been; and that I will support the Constitution of the United States of America. So help me God.

Christopher his + mark Lovett.

WORCESTER, ss. Court of Common Pleas. September 6th A. D., 1856.
Sworn to in Court.
Attest:
Clerk.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, ss. At a Court of Common Pleas begun and holden at Worcester within and for the County of Worcester, on the first Monday of September A. D. 1856, to wit, on the ~~fourth~~ fifth day of September during said term, Christopher Lovett was admitted to become a Citizen of the United States of America; and the Court ordered that the record thereof be made accordingly.

Attest, J. S. Mason Clerk.

The Presbytery,
Dingle,
Co Kerry,
Eire - Monday, 28.11.1977.

Mrs Helen C Read,
5711 Vail Avenue,
Toledo, O. 43623,
U.S.A.

Dear Mrs. Read,

Thank you for your letter of October 4, 1977 - and apologies for the delayed answer.

The facts in the books here about your late great-grandmother as contained in the Dingle Parish Records are not exactly 100% helpful. You tell me that her name was Josephine Ellen Lovett, born June 17, 1861 and that she was the daughter of John Lovett and Mary O'Shea or Long. Well, the following are the facts from the Dingle Parish Records:

1) Nell (Ellen?) was baptised on the 5.6.1858 - her father being John Lovett and her mother Mary O'Shea. Her sponsors at baptism were Mr McDonald and Kate Kevane. The family lived at Strand St., Dingle

11) Batt (Bartholomew?) baptised on 28.1.1856 - his father being John Lovett and mother Mary Lovett (was this her married name and not her maiden name ? We will never know, I'm afraid.) The family again lived at Strand St., Dingle. The sponsors in this case were John Rearden (Riordan ?) and Mrs O'Connor. The possibility is there that this Batt was a brother of Nell above - but there is the difficulty about the mother's name.

111) A child whose name is not given in the books, a son or daughter of John Lovett and Mary Long was baptised on the 10.10.1852; the sponsors were James Doyle and Johanna Sugrue. Again the family lived in Strand St., Dingle.

There are Lovett families still resident in the Parish.

I have checked the Baptisms from the year 1848 to the year 1862.
I have checked the marriages from 1849 to 1863 and in that time I cannot find any record telling me that a John Lovett got married.
There are three Parishes adjacent to this one. As long as they are untried there is always the chance of something coming up. They are Ballyferriter - address: Ballyferriter Parish, Tralee, Co Kerry.
Aunascaul Parish - address: Aunascaul Parish, Tralee, Co Kerry.
Castlegregory Parish - address: Castlegregory Parish, Tralee, Co Kerry. A letter t the priest in charge of any of the above parishes may prove helpful. Meanwhile, I will keep y[illegible]r letter and if I find anything of assistance to you in your search I will be i[illegible]mmunication with you again [illegible] Thomas Houlihan

Father Thomas Houlihan
The Presbytery
Dingle
Co. Kerry, Ireland

Dear Father Houlihan,

Thank you very much for your assistance in my Genealogical problem.

Indeed, one problem is leading to another, but this is part of the reason Genealogy is so fascinating.

I have written to the other Parish's you indicated, but not enough time has past for them to answer.

If any of the Lovett families living there are interested in genealogy, I would be glad to write to them. Sometimes old family papers or family Bibles produce connections otherwise forgotten.

Enclosed is a money order to help express my appreciation to you.

Sincerely,

Mrs. David J. Read

Two mergers, on September 4, 1867 and December 28, 1870 brought the three companies, along with the Hudson and Boston Railroad, together into one company, known as the Boston and Albany Railroad. The New York Central and Hudson River Railroad leased the B&A for 99 years from July 1, 1900. This lease passed to the New York Central Railroad in 1914; throughout this, the B&A kept its own branding in the public eye. The NYC merged into Penn Central on February 1, 1968.

LOVETT

Mrs. John Lovett

Echo - Aug. 25, 1911

PM

JOHN LOVETT is marketing his crop of strawberries and they are [illegible] up to the highest standard as to flavor and size. John Dailey says he has seen strawberries in Ireland and strawberries in Dakota, but they are nothing—[illegible]—the third ward produces. He measured several and finds the big ones measure 5½ inches in circumference while the smallest one he could find went over 1½ inches. They are the King Edward VII but a year old. He lived here and in Anderdon, until a few years ago, working in the quarry. He them moved to Detroit. The body was brought to Amherstburg on Wednesday and taken to the First Baptist church for services, afterwards being interred in Rose Hill cemetery. He leaves a widow, four daughters, two sons and nine grand children.

LOVETT—In Amherstburg, Saturday, August 19th, Catherine, wife of Mr. John Lovett in the 61st year of her age.

The numerous friends of Mrs. John Lovett were shocked to hear of her death on Saturday last. Up to the Tuesday before her death she scarcely knew a sick day. Early that morning she arose from bed to lay on the lounge, where she was striken down with parlaysis, and lingered on until Saturday when she passed peacefully away. She was in a semi-conscious condition until noon Thursday. Mrs. Lovetts maiden name was Cavauagh, she was born in Holyoke, Mass., and was married to Mr. Lovett in 1876; they came to Amherstburg about 1880. They had one son who died in infancy. Her mother Mrs. John Cavanaugh died in Amherstburg 15 years ago. Mrs. (Capt.) Sella Fowler, of Amherstburg, is her only sister. Mrs. Lovett was always caring for her neighbors and friends, was very devoted to her church and of a jolly disposition. She had a host of friends. The Monday before she was stricken, Hy. Swatridge an old friend and resident of Amherstburg 25 years ago, called on them and they had a merry time, she being in excellent spirits. Mr. Lovett had a similar stroke and for a time lost his speech, this gave her great uneasiness, for fear of a return stroke and worry undermined her health. The funeral took place Monday morning from the residence to the R. C. church, Amherstburg, where requiem mass was sung and interment followed in the R. C. cemetery, the pallbearers being James Campeau, J. C. Cousins, D. H. Terry, J. J. Ryan, John Ryan, Thomas Barry. Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mrs. Thomas Hunt and daughter Mrs. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. William Hunt, of Toledo; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barry, Mrs. Chas. Rourke and Mrs. Quinlan, of Detroit. A large number of friends from Amherstburg attended the obsequies.

John Lovett is marketing his crop of strawberries and they are again up to the highest standard as to flavor and size. John Dailey says he has seen strawberries in Ireland and strawberries in Dakota, but they are nothing like what the third ward produces. He measured several and finds the big ones measure 5½ inches in circumference while the smallest one he could find went over 1½ inches. They are the King Edward VII

THE list of drowning accidents in Monday's papers ought to be enough to convince the most skeptical that death lurks in the water just as surely as in the smallpox pest house, only a little surer.

MRS. HANDCOCK sr., who suffered a fracture of the hip by falling on the sidewalk, was taken to Hotel Dieu, this week by O. H. Kemp, for treatment. Mrs. J. Lovett and Mrs. T. Barry accompanied her.

ported in 1832-1834 to dig the canal in Chicopee and later work on the construction of railroad tracks in Western Massachusetts. In the middle fifties there was a considerable Irish population in Chicopee and already a few were merchants in the town. The Irish settled in the West End section of Chicopee and this section was called Ireland and The Patch. The Irish were Catholics and their conduct and behavior was at first shocking to the staid Yankees. Newspaper accounts of the period stated "the Irish were heavy rum-drinkers and the cause of rowdyism in the streets." More important, Sunday for the Irish workers was a day of amusement, and this more than anything else, offended Yankee sensibilities, who on the Sabbath observed a day of reserved calm and quiet. In the downward pressure of wage cuts in the cotton mills and speed-up of machinery, Irish young men began to enter mill employment in increasing numbers, working side by side with women in the weaving rooms. As Yankee operatives

The first change was noted in the reduced attendance in Protestant churches and the development and growth of Roman Catholic churches. The Irish, French-Canadian and Polish factory workers were devout Roman Catholics. The next step was the challenge of the Irish to supplant the Yankee middle class in political leadership. The first friction took place in the 1873 town meeting between the solid bloc of Yankees and the Irish.

This particular period also witnessed the high point of middle class development and fulfilment in the community. Socially, life was fuller than it had ever been. The growth of lyceums and debating clubs, and baseball and rifle clubs was noted. The number of concerts and lectures increased, brass bands and singing societies were organized. In the seventies amateur theatricals became popular. Characteristic of the period was the rapid development of the fraternal lodges and societies. Drawing classes, spelling bees, parties of all kinds were frequent. The solid citizenry busied itself with social work, for it was permitted to forget that it lived in a factory town, and it sponsored reading rooms, and tried, unsuccessfully to organize a Y. M. C. A. unit. Their most important activity of this nature consisted of temperance work. Toward the end of this period amusement was well diversified, and for certain members of the group, began to grow more expensive and more selective. Bicycle and tennis clubs made

Samuel Lewis

A Topographical Dictionary of Ireland

1837

DINGLE, or DINGLE-I-COUCH, an incorporated sea-port, market, and post-town, (formerly a parliamentary borough), and a parish, in the barony of CORKAGUINEY, county of KERRY, and province of MUNSTER, 22 miles (W.) from Tralee, and 173 miles (S. W. by W.) from Dublin; containing 6719 inhabitants, of which number, 4327 are in the town. This place was anciently called Dangean-ni-Cushey, or "the castle of Hussey," from a castle built here by an old English family of that name, to whom one of the Earls of Desmond had granted a considerable tract of land in the vicinity. On the rebellion and consequent forfeitures of the Desmond family and its adherents, it was, with divers lands, granted to the Earl of Ormonde, from whom it was purchased by

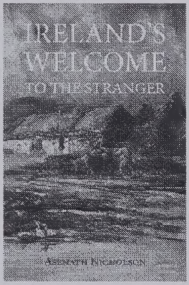
An American widow's account of her travels in Ireland in 1844–45 on the eve of the Great Famine:



Ireland's Welcome to the Stranger

Sailing from New York, she set out to determine the condition of the Irish poor and discover why so many were emigrating to her home country.

Fitzgerald, Knight of Kerry, who had also a castle in this town. After the destruction of the Spaniards at Smerwick, in 1581, the lord-deputy rested here, where many of his men died from sickness, notwithstanding the supplies brought in by the Earl of Ormonde. Soon after this event, Queen Elizabeth granted £300 to the inhabitants to surround the town with walls; but in 1600, the sugan Earl of Desmond having been refused admittance into the Knight of Kerry's castle, revenged the affront by setting fire to the town; the Knight subsequently delivered up the castle to Sir Charles Wilmot, who for some time made it his head-quarters.

Dingle is the most westerly town in Ireland; it is situated in lat. 52° 10' 30" and lon. 10° 15' 45", on the northern coast of the bay of the same name, an inlet from which forms the harbour; and may be called the capital of the extensive peninsula which comprises the entire barony of Corkaguiney. This district is generally supposed to have been colonised by the Spaniards, who formerly carried on an extensive fishery off the coast, and traded with the inhabitants, who still retain strong indications of their Spanish origin, and some of the old houses are evidently built in the Spanish fashion. The town occupies a hilly slope, and is surrounded by mountains on all sides except that towards the harbour, which here presents the appearance of a lake; the outlet being concealed by a projecting headland. The streets are irregularly disposed, but as there are more than the usual proportion of respectable slated houses, with gardens

Mrs Nicholson's recollections of her tour among the peasantry are still revealing and gripping today.

The author returned to Ireland in 1847–49 to help with famine relief and recorded those experiences in the rather harrowing:Annals of the Famine in Ireland.

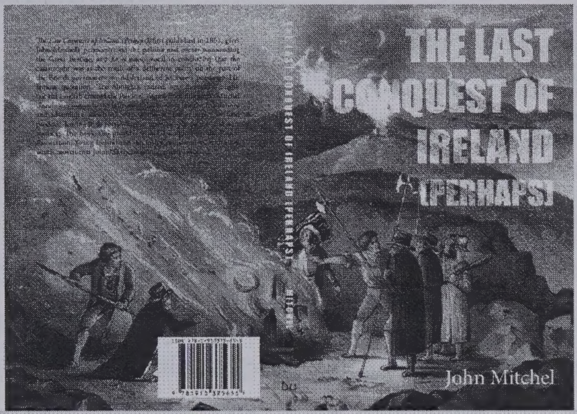
attached, the town has from a short distance a very pleasing appearance.

The Last Conquest of Ireland (Perhaps) - John Mitchel



The number of houses, in 1831, was 699, since which several others have been erected: the inhabitants are well supplied with excellent water; though not lighted, and but partially paved, it has been much improved within the last 20 years, is generally considered a very healthy place of residence, and has an excellent bathing strand. A news-room is supported by subscription. The manufacture of linen was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, and at one time exported to the amount of £60,000 annually; but since the great improvement of the cotton manufacture, it has gradually declined, and is now nearly extinct: a small quantity of coarse linen is still made in the town and neighbourhood, and sent to Cork. The present export trade, though not considerable, is increasing: it consists chiefly in corn and butter, of which about 10 cargoes, averaging 200 tons each, are annually sent to England, chiefly to Liverpool. The principal imports are iron, coal, salt, and earthenware.

An extensive fishery is carried on in the bay and off the coast, in which about 100 boats, averaging six men in each, are exclusively employed; and which also affords employment to upwards of 1000 persons in curing and conveying the fish to various parts. The greater portion is sent by sea to Cork and Limerick, but a considerable supply is conveyed by land to Tralee and Killarney. The pier, originally built by the corporation, aided by a grant of £1000, in 1765, from the Irish Parliament, was enlarged by the late Fishery Board, and subsequently improved by the customs' department: it has been found beneficial for mercantile and agricultural purposes, as well as the fisheries: vessels of 300 tons' can come up to it. The harbour is well adapted for vessels of moderate burden, but not being discoverable from the sea, is what is nautically termed a "blind" one; it is, however, extremely difficult of access during a strong west wind, and vessels passing by it and running to the eastward are in danger of being lost on Castlemaine bar.

The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied with stock and provisions of every description; there are no fairs, the market being considered a sort of weekly fair for cattle and pigs: about 800 of the latter are sent annually to Cork. The market and court-house were erected by the late Knight of Kerry. There are two flour-mills, and an ale and porter brewery in the town, and branches of the National and Agricultural Banks have been lately established. Here are chief stations of the constabulary police and coast-guard; the latter being the head of the district, extending along the coast from the bay of Dingle to Brandon Head, and comprising the stations of Minard, Dingle, Ventry, Ferriter's-Cove, Ballydavid, and Brandon.

Dingle is the residence of the inspecting commander. Queen Elizabeth, in the 28th year of her reign, (1585) signed a warrant for the grant of a charter of incorporation to the inhabitants of the town, with privileges similar to the borough of Drogheda, and with a superiority over the harbours of Smerwick, Ventry, and Ferriter's-Creek; but the charter was not actually granted until the 4th of James I. This charter, which is the only one known, was granted to the "Sovereign, Burgesses, and Commonalty," from which it would appear that the corporation was then in existence, probably under the authority of the warrant of Elizabeth. The town, however, under the name of Dingle-i-couch, is found among those that sent members to Parliament in the 27th of Elizabeth. The style of the corporation is "The Sovereign, Burgesses, and Commonalty, of the Town of Dingle-i-Couch;" it consists of a sovereign, 12 burgesses (including the sovereign), and an indefinite number of freemen. The officers are a recorder, town-clerk, two serjeants-at-mace, weighmaster, and pound-keeper, none of whom are mentioned in the charter.

This charter, which is the only one known, was granted to the "Sovereign, Burgesses, and Commonalty," from which it would appear that the corporation was then in existence, probably under the authority of the warrant of Elizabeth. The town, however, under the name of Dingle-i-couch, is found among those that sent members to Parliament in the 27th of Elizabeth. The style of the corporation is "The Sovereign, Burgesses, and Commonalty, of the Town of Dingle-i-Couch." It consists of a sovereign, 12 burgesses (including the sovereign), and an indefinite number of freemen. The officers are a recorder, town-clerk, two serjeants-at-mace, weighmaster, and pound-keeper, none of whom are mentioned in the charter.

The sovereign is elected from among the burgesses by the corporation at large, annually on the feast of St. James; but by the charter he may be also elected from the freemen. The charter does not contain any provisions as to the number of burgesses, or the mode of their election; but the number has always been limited to 12, who are elected for life by the corporation at large. No right of freedom has been recognised, and freemen are elected by the body corporate, without reference to qualification of residence or otherwise. The recorder is elected for life by the corporation; the town-clerk, formerly elected by the whole body, has of late been appointed by the sovereign alone; by whom also the serjeants-at-mace, weighmaster, and pound-keeper are appointed.

The borough sent two representatives to the Irish Parliament until the Union, when it was disfranchised, and the entire compensation of £15,000 paid to Richard Boyle Townshend, Esq., several other claims having been disallowed. His representative, Lieut.-Col. John Townshend, and Lord Ventry are the principal proprietors of the town; the Earl of Cork has a small portion along the sea-shore. The jurisdiction of the corporation comprises a circle of two Irish miles radius by sea and land, measured from the parish church in the town, and includes the parishes of Dingle, Kildrum, Garfinagh, the south part of Cloghane and part of Kinnard; and the admiralty jurisdiction of the sovereign extends as far as an arrow will fly from the harbours of Dingle, Ventry, Smerwick, and Ferriter's-Creek.

The sovereign is by the charter the sole justice of the peace within the borough, with power to try all but capital offences; he is also escheator and coroner, and has the exclusive return of writs: but these powers have not been strictly exercised, as the magistrates, coroner, and sheriffs of the county act by courtesy within the corporate limits. The civil court, called "The Tholsel Court of the Borough and Corporation of Dingle," is held every alternate Thursday by the recorder (who is always the sovereign, or deputy sovereign), and the jurisdiction is stated to extend to pleas of any amount: the mesne process is by service or attachment of the goods; but the latter process is only issued for debts exceeding 40s. late currency.

The recorder also holds a court of conscience for demands under 5s. late currency: the process is by summons. Petty sessions are held by the county magistrates every alternate Friday, into which the criminal jurisdiction of the sovereign (who is also, but not ex officio, a magistrate for the county) has merged. Quarter sessions of the peace were in former times regularly held for the borough, when the vaults of Hussey's castle were used as the town gaol. Within the last half century these sessions have rarely been held; the last was in 1824, when a schedule of tolls and customs was settled by the grand jury. Under the new act, two sessions are to be holden annually here, in April and October. The new bridewell is a small but substantial, building, containing two day-rooms, two yards, and six cells. Adjoining the town are some tracts of rocky and indifferent mountain land, called "The Commons," the boundaries of which are not defined; they are occupied indiscriminately by the poorer class of inhabitants, by whom some encroachments have been made in the erection of cabins, and the enclosure of small portions of ground for gardens: these are chiefly on the part called Milltown, where about 30 cabins have been built.

The parish contains 11,779 statute acres, as applotted under the tithe act, of which about one-fourth consists of coarse mountain pasture, partly reclaimable; there is a portion of bog, but not sufficient to supply the inhabitants with fuel. Seaweed is extensively used for manure, and the state of agriculture is gradually improving. Good building stone is found in the parish. The principal seat in the vicinity is Burnham House, the property of Lord Ventry, and now the residence of his agent, D. P. Thompson, Esq., who has much improved the house and demesne. Burnham is situated on the S. W. side of the harbour (on the border of the adjoining parish of Kildrum), and commands a fine view of the town and harbour of Dingle, and the range of mountains at the foot of which they lie. The other seats are, the Grove, the former residence of the Knights of Kerry, now of J. Hickson, Esq., situated in a finely wooded demesne immediately adjoining the town; Monaree, of the Hon. R. Mullins; Farinikilla, the modern mansion of P. B. Hussey, Esq.; and Balintagart, of S. Murray Hickson, Esq.

The living is an impropriate cure, in the diocese of Ardfert and Aghadoe, and in the patronage of Lord Ventry, in whom the rectory is impropriate: the tithes amount to £315, payable to the impropriator, who allows the curate £50 per annum (late currency), and has allotted him the vicarial tithes, amounting to £75. of the neighbouring parish, of which his Lordship has the nomination. Lord Ventry also maintains a chaplain, at a salary of £150 per annum, who is resident in the town, and assists in the performance of the clerical duties. The old church, which was dedicated to St. James, is said to have been built by the Spaniards: it was originally a very large structure. A part of it, called St. Mary's Chapel, was kept in repair until the erection of the present parish church, on the site of the ancient, edifice, in 1807: the latter was built by a gift of £1100 from the late Board of First Fruits; it is a plain structure, and, having become too small for the increasing congregation, is about to be enlarged and thoroughly repaired; for which purpose a grant of £317. 17. 4. has been recently made by the Ecclesiastical Board.

In the R. C. divisions the parish is the head of a union or district, which also comprises the parishes of Ventry, Kildrum, Garfinagh, the south part of Cloghane, Kinnard, and the greater part of Minard. The chapel at Dingle is a handsome and spacious modern edifice, and there are chapels at Ventry and Lispole. Adjoining the chapel at Dingle is a convent for nuns of the order of the Presentation, a branch from that of Tralee, established here in 1829; a neat chapel is attached, which contains a finely and well executed altar-piece of the crucifixion.

The parochial school is supported by subscription, and is under the superintendence of the curate. A school for boys, and a school at the convent for girls, have been hitherto chiefly supported by the parish priest; the girls are gratuitously instructed by the nuns, and are also taught plain and ornamental needlework. A new school-house, for the accommodation of about 500 boys, has been lately erected in connexion with the National Board, by whom two-thirds of the expense of its erection have been defrayed, and the remaining third by subscription: the total expense was about £300. Attached to Burnham House is a school for Protestant female orphans, originally established by Mrs. D. P. Thompson at Tralee, during the cholera (in consequence of the number of female orphans left destitute by that awful visitation), and recently removed to Burnham House. They are received on the recommendation of respectable parties, who guarantee the payment of £5 per annum for each towards the expense of their board, the deficiency being made up by the patrons: the number is at present limited to 16. The mistress receives from 25 to 30 guineas per annum, from Mr. Thompson, at whose expense, also, the school-house was fitted up and furnished, and who provides the children's clothing. The gross number of children educated in the parish, including three private schools, is 400, of which about 290 are boys and 110 girls.

The late Matthew Moriarty, Esq., left a house in Dingle as a dwelling, rent-free, for eight poor widows; it is kept in repair by his representatives, but the inmates have no pecuniary allowance. Here is a dispensary. In the churchyard is a tomb of the Fitzgerald family, with an inscription in Gothic characters, bearing the date 1504. Of the ancient monastery which formerly existed here, as a cell to the abbey of Killagh, near Castlemaine, there are no remains. At Ballybeg, north-east of the town, is a strongly impregnated mineral spring, of a chalybeo-sulphureous nature, but not much used for medicinal purposes; and along the shore of the bay are several caves, in which are often found the beautiful crystallizations called "Kerry stones." From Connor Hill to the north-east of Dingle, on the road to Castle-Gregory, a splendid view, embracing both sides of the peninsula, is obtained. On one side is seen the bay of Dingle, as far as the island of Valentia, with the great Skellig rock in the distance, and the town and harbour of Dingle lying immediately beneath; and on the other side, Brandon bay and several bold headlands. On each side are mountains, with wide and deep valleys intervening, and numerous tarns or small lakes lying in the hollows of the hills.

The fishery is carried on chiefly from the ports of Valencia and Dingle; the kinds taken are cod, ling, hake, glasson, and some haddock. Along the shores of the Kenmare river the fishery is also carried on to some extent; and here that of pilchards was also a great source of profit, but the fish have quitted the coast many years since. Salmon is also abundant, though much thinned by the seals, which frequent the shores in such numbers that the rocks are covered with them in Summer: these are killed sometimes with musket balls, and sometimes by moonlight in the caverns where they sleep. Dingle bay is famous for its crayfish, and for lobsters on its northern side; oysters and other shellfish are to be obtained in many places.

The people in general, though superstitious, querulous, and, from want of regular employment, of an idle disposition, are inquisitive and extremely intelligent. It is well known that classical learning was sought after even to a fault among the lower orders throughout the county, many of whom had more knowledge of the Latin language than those of the higher classes in other parts.

There was a Mary 1840 and a Catherine 1843 born to John Lovett and Mary Shea, both addresses Ventry, also a Bartholomew born 1845 Castle (Rahinnane Castle, Ventry?). Could be same parents and they moved into Dingle famine era? I can see an Ellen born in Strand to John and Mary Shea, Dingle 1858 ... all on Irishgenealogy.ie church records. I cannot find a credible marriage though, which would likely have been Dingle parish late 1830s if this was the same couple. Have you done DNA? If you are related to me (A665112 on GEDmatch), I'd wager your Sheas were originally from Kildurrihy, Ventry (though I am also related to other Shea lines in Ballylusky, Coumenoole and Moorestown, all west of Dingle). Have a look also at the Valuation Office records on nationalarchives.ie also, eg http://census.nationalarchives.ie/.../IRE_CENSUS_1821-51... .. this could be your John Lovett "arriving" in Dingle .. maybe.

Ellen Crimmins

Orphaned by 1851- think her mother could have passed away but father still living.

15 Dec 1877 deed Ellen purchased 13 George St. from A. Bastien. On same date was recorded a mortgage between Wm. George & Ellen & A. Bastien. On17 Nov. 1880 another mortgage transaction was between Wm. G & Ellen and M. Tworney which indicate the later was the purchaser. Did he just supply the mortgage or did he get the property? Marsh Coll. has the deeds. The streets have been renumbered as Lot #13 George St. is now 229 George St. Have detail descriptions of deed transfers but it was not known even then just why Ellen & George gave up the house. It is assumed it was a default on the mortgage payment. I also have a copy of Wm. and Ellen's signatures from one of the deeds. Both had very nice handwriting.

Mrs. Ellen Lovette.

Mr. Nicholas Ferriter, of this city, received by wire Wednesday evening news of the death of his only sister, Mrs. Ellen Lovette, of Springfield, Mass., formerly of this city. The news came unexpectedly and was a sudden shock to Mr. Ferriter.

Mrs. Lovette resided in Richmond for a number of years, and her acquaintance was widespread. She possessed a lovely character.

Apart from names, the only other Latin needing explanation is that used in recording marriage dispensations. These were necessary when the two people marrying were related, consanguinati, and the relationship was given in terms of degrees, with siblings first degree, first cousins second degree, and second cousins third degree, Thus a couple recorded as consanguinati in tertio grado are second cousins, information which can be of value in disentangling earlier generations. A less frequent Latin comment, affinitatus, records an earlier relationship, but only by marriage, between the two parties, which could create an impediment to the marriage.

WORCESTER SUPERIOR COURT CO OF WORCESTER VOL. 10 PET. NO. 6 8 4

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, ss.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court begun and holden at Worcester within and for the County of Worcester, on the third Monday of October in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four,

Respectfully represents Bartholomew Lovett of West Brookfield in the County of Worcester, an alien and free white person, that he was born in the County of Kerry in Ireland on or about the ninth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty nine and is now about forty ~~three~~ four years of age: that he arrived at Boston in the State of Massachusetts, in the United States of America, on or about the fifteenth day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty eight that it is his bona fide intention to become a Citizen of the United States of America, and to renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign Prince, Potentate, State, and Sovereignty, whatever, and particularly to

Victoria, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, whose subject he has heretofore been; All which together with this declaration thereof on oath, before appears in the Records of ~~said Court~~ the Supreme Judicial Court of said County of Worcester, to wit: at the April Term thereof, A. D. 1872.

And said petitioner further represents that he has ever since continued to reside within the jurisdiction of said United States, to wit: at West Brookfield aforesaid

that he has never borne any hereditary title, or been of any of the orders of Nobility: that he is ready to renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign Prince, Potentate, State, or Sovereignty, whatsoever, and particularly to the said Victoria, Queen

as aforesaid, whose subject he has heretofore been: that he is attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same;

Wherefore, said Petitioner prays, that he may be admitted to become a citizen of the said United States of America, according to the forms of the Statutes in such case made and provided.

Bartholomew Lovett

ice above it. Connected with the ferry is the following bit of romance:—A young man from Chicopee, who was in the habit of calling on a South Hadley Falls young woman, found it convenient to cross here frequently. But one evening, having received a negative answer to a certain important question, he came down to the ferry and sat on the edge of the boat, looking quite dejected. Then of a sudden there was a splash, and the startled ferrymen noted the unfortunate young man had gone over backwards into the water. They made haste to fish him out, and he being half drowned, the question was what to do with him. Now the ferrymen knew at which house it was his habit to call, but did not know the circumstances of his last leaving it. They therefore bore their unconscious charge thither. Between the tragic facts of the case, the neighbors and the doctor who came to assist, there was great excitement. The sequel is of the kind one finds in novels more often than in real life. The man lay there in the house sick for some time, his mother came to nurse him, and, last but not least, the young lady in the case repeated her former decision and changed it to a "yes."

COUNTY DEATHS

John Lovett

John Lovett, an old resident of Amherstburg, died at the home of his counsin, Thomas Barry, Detroit, on Thursday of last week. Mr. and Mrs. Lovett came to Amherstburg from Massachusetts, when the Canada Southern Railway was built. They had no family. After Mrs. Lovett's death, Mr. Lovett continued to reside in Amherstburg until 3 years ago, when he went to Detroit, and made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Barry.

PATRICK M. SHEA, of Chicopee Falls, Hampden County, Mass., ex-Postmaster and a well-known undertaker, was born in County Kerry, Ireland, March 15, 1840. His parents, Maurice and Ellen (Moriarty) Shea, were natives of the same place, where the father followed for a number of years the trade of blacksmith; but in 1849 he came to America, and located in Holyoke, Mass., being there employed for many years by Captain Mack, working, however, at different places as opportunity offered. Maurice Shea lived to be eighty-eight years old and his wife to be sixty-two years of age. They were the parents of six children, named as follows: Johanna, Mary, Ellen, Catherine, Patrick M., and John, all of whom are now living.

Patrick M. was educated in the schools of Holyoke, and worked for a while with his father at the trade of blacksmith. During the early part of the war he was in the employ of the Massachusetts Arms Company, and later at Whitneyville he worked for the Whitneyville Arms Company on guns and at tool forging. After the war he came to Chicopee Falls, and worked in the shops of Belcher & Taylor, and also was in the employ of the Lamb Manufacturing Company and of the J. Stevens Company on fine work. In 1866 Mr. Shea opened a dry-goods store in the village on Bridge Street, which was in successful operation till 1873. He then moved to Main Street, and opened the undertaker's establishment, which he has since conducted, likewise

Since the supply of native labor could not meet the demands of these growing industries, Irish immigrants, driven from their homes by the potato famine of 1846-7,[4] eventually found jobs waiting for them in the Chicopee mills. Some of these sons of Erin came into the valley as laborers on the Northampton and Springfield railroad, which was built along the eastern bank of the Connecticut in 1845, passing through Chicopee Center and Willimansett.[5] Irish girls were recruited from New York state where work on the Erie Canal had attracted many immigrants some time earlier. By 1858 not only was the mill population sixty percent Irish, but the male sex, at first limited to positions as overseers and mechanics, comprised from fifteen to twenty percent of the workers.[6] The old boarding-house system with its Puritan discipline fell into the discard.

Taylor, and also was in the employ of the Lamb Manufacturing Company and of the J. Stevens Company on fine work. In 1866 Mr. Shea opened a dry-goods store in the village on Bridge Street, which was in successful operation till 1873. He then moved to Main Street, and opened the undertaker's establishment, which he has since conducted, likewise having charge of the Catholic cemetery, selling the lots as required. He has also established a livery, which is the largest in the village. He has erected new stables with office in connection, also boarding stables, and keeps a supply of from fourteen to twenty horses for public use.

In 1861 Mr. Shea was married to Miss Bridget A. Hoar, who was born in County Kerry, Ireland, in August, 1840, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Shea) Hoar, of that locality, who became farmers of Chicopee Falls after coming to America. They both lived to advanced age, the father being eighty-six years old at the time of his death, and his wife eighty-eight years. Their family consisted of eleven children, as follows: Johanna, Patrick, Mary, Ellen, Catherine, Elizabeth, Maurice, Thomas, John, Bridget, and Michael, five only of whom are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Shea are the parents of thirteen children, namely: Elizabeth, born in 1862, now wife of William M. Scanlan, civil engineer, living in New York City; Maurice, born 1863; Allen, born 1865; John, born 1867 (these three deceased); Frank J., born 1869; Joseph T., born 1871; Patrick L., born 1873; Michael L., born 1875; Mary R., born 1878; Dorothy, born 1880; Cecelia, born 1883; Theresa C., born 1884; and Ambrose, born 1886 (deceased). Mrs. Shea found time, in addition to the management of her large family, to establish quite a business in dressmaking and millinery, which indicates well the energy of her character and her habits of ceaseless industry.

Mr. Shea is a Democrat in his politics, and takes an active interest in all matters which concern the good government of the village. He is one of the Trustees of the Chicopee Falls Savings Bank, and has served as Postmaster under President Cleveland's first administration. As an enterprising business man and a loyal citizen, he receives the confidence and respect of his neighbors and fellow-townsmen.

Until the Catholic hierarchy created a French Canadian parish in 1869 and appointed a resident Canadian priest, the French colony had little to do with the Catholic church in Holyoke. What became of these people, at home devoted to their religion? Theirs was a sorry plight. Irish Catholics discovered in 1869, to their horror, that a number of the French Canadian girls in town were receiving instruction in English in a Protestant church.[35] The ill-feeling engendered by such a circumstance was not easily soothed. Common religion so far from acting as a bond served as a source of antagonism. Furthermore, there was first the indignation of the Canadians at the little concealed preparations of the Irish Fenians in town for the conquest of Canada in 1870, and then later the ridicule meted out to the ingloriously returned band after its fiasco. The other foreigners in town were more prone to sympathize with the French Canadians than with the Irish, if only because of the preponderance of the Irish.

The story of the Fenians of Holyoke is rather a tale apart. Among the native Americans in the sixties there was a good deal of sympathy with the brotherhood. There were two chapters here, the Irish Lion Circle and the O'Neil Circle. During 1868 and 1869 the Fenians drilled regularly in Exchange Hall behind locked doors, employing their rifles saved from war service or secretly acquired afterward. A number were Civil War veterans, and the Holyoke company was joined by men from Westfield and a delegation from Springfield. In addition to secretly drilling they openly paraded on St. Patrick's Day in gay uniform, "green jacket trimmed with orange braid, and blue pants, with cap," arousing thereby more interest than disapproval.

The projected invasion of Canada, to be sure, was by no means a purely local undertaking. General Sweeney of the United States Army was proclaimed to be one of the leaders of an army that was to cross the border in several sections. And in 1869 one or two raids actually took place. But the O'Neil Guards of Holyoke were part of the last Holyoke was one of the earliest planned cities in America. In 1847, the Boston Associates purchased land in a region called Ireland Parish and took advantage of the 60-foot drop in the river to build a canal system that would provide power for dozens of mills. They named the newly formed city Holyoke for Capt. Elizur Holyoke, who explored the region in 1633.

Railroads and industrialization

Light manufacturing began to grow in the 19th century, including tanned hides, horse carriages, gunpowder, ceramics, industrial pipes, hats, and boats.[24]

When the Industrial Revolution reached Western Massachusetts in the 19th century, the region's many fast-moving rivers resulted in a mill town boom. Early textile and paper mills were staffed by Irish famine immigrants who nearly doubled their population in the town between 1840 and 1860. Paper manufacturing became a major regional industry, including within the town limits included (mostly clustered on the Agawam River) the Southworth Paper Company (1839), the Agawam Paper Company (1859), the Agawam Canal Company, the Springfield Glazed Paper Company (1882), the Worthy Paper Company (1892), the Mittineague Paper Company (1892, later known as the Strathmore Paper Company and acquired by International Paper[25])

The Western Railroad opened for freight and passenger service in 1841, connecting West Springfield to Worcester, Boston, the Berkshires, and upstate New York. It would become the Boston and Albany Railroad in 1870. Travel time from Boston to Albany was considerably reduced from the over 40 hours it took by stagecoach in the 1820s.[26] The covered wooden railroad bridge across the Connecticut which opened in 1841, was replaced by the current double-track steel truss railroad bridge in 1874.[27]

West Springfield became a major transportation hub, and the railroad became one of the largest employers in the town for many decades. Repair shops were also built in West Springfield in 1896,[28] and at the peak of operations, there were two major rail yards - one in Mittineague, and one near the present-day Memorial Avenue.

The original horsecar trolley, operated by the Springfield Street Railway, opened in 1877 from Main Street in Springfield to Elm and Park Streets, via Main Street and the old toll bridge at Bridge Street. It was later extended via Westfield Street to (Upper) Church Street. Electrification was completed in 1892-3, and the river crossing was moved to the original North End Bridge. Over the years, extensions were made to the Holyoke Street Railway (via Riverdale Road, 1895), Tatham (1896) the Woronoco Street Railway (in Westfield, 1899), the Connecticut border via Riverside Park (now Six Flags New England) in Agawam (1900), Feeding Hills (1902), and eventually the Suffield Street Railway in Connecticut (making the Hartford-West Side Line possible, 1905).[29]

The destruction of the old North End Bridge in 1923 saw relocation of the trolley crossing to the modern Memorial Bridge. But trolley passenger service was cut starting in 1924 and by 1936, completely eliminated. Present-day local and intercity mass transit is provided by Pioneer Valley Transit Authority bus routes, Amtrak, and private bus carriers. Peter Pan Bus Lines is headquartered in Springfield.

Conversion from steam to diesel locomotives shut down the West Springfield repair shop in 1956.[30] With the rise of the automobile, the West Springfield (Mittineague) passenger railroad station closed in 1957.[31] Amtrak service is still available to Springfield, and the central rail yard is still in active use for freight by CSX, the present-day successor of this part of the Boston & Albany.

Rural Free Delivery started delivering postal mail to residents' homes in the late 19th or early 20th century.

A major power plant for the Western Massachusetts Electric Company (now a subsidiary of Northeast Utilities) went online in West Springfield in 1949.[32]

Immigrant sweat built Paper City

The first group of immigrants came to Holyoke in the 1840s.

BY MIKE BURKE
Staff writer

HOLYOKE- If one were to write a textbook on immigration and ethnic patterns in the Industrial Revolution of the 19th century, Holyoke could be a prime example.

A proposal to bring Somali refugees to this city would be in keeping with a tradition in which Holyoke has been home to many different immigrants.

To understand Holyoke and its growth, you must understand its history.

The very exploration of the site where the city now stands was done by one Elizur Holyoke, an English explorer, for whom the city, the college and the mountain were all named. Holyoke in fact was married to the daughter of William Pynchon, one of the founders of Springfield, according tot he city annals available through the Holyoke Room of the Holyoke Public LIbrary.

At that time, the area was inhabited by American Indians. An occasional farmer would come along, usually up river from Springfield.

For many years, Holyoke was known as Ireland Parish and was a section of West Springfield. At that time it was little more than a way station on the road between Springfield and Northampton and there were taverns along the road for weary travelers to refresh themselves.

The first Irish immigrants to the area arrived in the 1840s and helped to build the railroad.

It was about this time that The Hadley Falls Co., a group of Yankee businessmen from the eastern part of the state, heavily invested in Holyoke, seeing the potential of the Connecticut River as a source of power to drive the turbines of industry. That group has also invested in eastern cities such as Lowell, Haverhill and later Lawrence.

Many of Holyoke's downtown streets such as Cabot, Dwight, Lyman and Appleton were named after the officials of the company.

Construction of a dam across the river, financed initially by the Hadley group, was begun in the 1840s and more Irish workers were brought in at that time to do that work.

After several failed attempts at building a dam, the Daniel O'Connell's Sons Co., replete with Irish workers, finally finished the dam under the auspices of the Holyoke Water Power Co., which had supplanted a bankrupt Hadley company.

When the dam and canal systems were in place, heavy industry, paper manufacturing and silk mills among others, were constructed. Again the Irish had a hand in the construction and also got many of the new jobs that opened up when those industries began.

Once the factories and mills opened, the owners looked around and saw that they needed more help to keep them running.

The mill owners hired an agent, one Jones Davis, who also looked around and found that the nearest "help" would come from Quebec Province in Canada. Davis sent an agent there, especially to Sorel in Quebec, to recruit female labor. The women came for the work and brought their families, parents, brothers and sisters with them.

The first settled area of the city was the old Ward 4, now pretty much the downtown of the city.

The Irish moved into recently constructed "blocks," one of which, "Dillion Block" at Maple and Hampden streets, was a huge edifice that housed many families over the years. In fact, it became known as Dillion's "baby factory" because so many of the city's new citizens were born there.

The churches also came along with the immigrants.

St. Jerome, the "mother church" of Holyoke, on Hampden Street, which still serves a population in the city, was the first "Irish" church built.

When the French-Canadians came, they followed the Irish, first into Ward 4 but more prominently into "the Flats" section or the old Ward 1. An "Irish" church, Rosary, was already built there and gradually the French-Canadians had their own church, Precious Blood, in South Holyoke and later Immaculate Conception in Ward 1.

The Polish immigration began later, in the 1880s and they gradually took over the old Ward 4 from the Irish. Their Church, Mater Dolorosa, opened in the mid-1890s.

Many Germans came in the 19th century. Those who were mill-wrights and the like, took up residences in the old Springdale section of the southern part of the city along the river. Many others, farmers, moved into West Holyoke to operate the dairy and vegetable farms.

Scotsmen came too. They were well schooled in the paper industry and they settled in Holyoke as well.

The Lutheran churches followed in with the Germans, and the Scots brought their denominations with them as well, including the Presbyterian Church.

From the 1920s on, the rate of immigration slowed and as the work in the factories and mills began to ebb away, the immigration rates slowed even more.

During the 1960s, a new ethnic group began to move to Holyoke: the Hispanics, mostly Puerto Ricans, came to this area to work in the tobacco fields and in the various farms surrounding the city.

As the Irish, French-Canadians, Polish and others gradually moved from their neighborhoods, the old blocks became available to the new waves of people coming to the city. Holyoke had the housing stock and the jobs were there in the fields and indeed in some of the factories in the city.

The Hispanic population has grown in the city so that today about one third of the population of 40,000 is Hispanic. Seventy percent of students in city schools are Hispanic.

Recently. Southeast Asians such as Vietnamese and Laotians have also moved to the city, although numbers are smaller than the groups that preceded them.

All this sets the stage for the influx of new people into the city. And, as it was over a century ago, newcomers are bound to come.

"This is a free country and people can go where they want," Mayor Michael J. Sullivan has said.

Immigration and Migration to Holyoke

"...we all are in this strange country": Immigration and Migration to Holyoke

There is an early and continuing importance of immigration and migration to Holyoke. By the 1880s, Holyoke, known as The Paper City, was a booming industrial center. Immigrants from Europe and Canada and migrants from Puerto Rico came to work and made the city their home. As each group of people arrived - Irish, French Canadians, Italians, Germans, Poles and Puerto Ricans - an adjustment resulted as newcomers joined the competition for jobs and housing. Holyoke's history holds a powerful story of the development of a mill town into a booming industry. It is also a story of the immigrants and migrants who contributed to a fluid and complex set of new and established cultural patterns. Their impact on the social and cultural identity of the community is reflected in Holyoke today. This exhibit examines the reasons people emigrated from Ireland, Canada, Poland, Italy, Germany and Puerto Rico to Holyoke, Massachusetts. It also features an introduction to ethnic enclaves created when immigrants and migrants moved into the city. Finally, the exhibit addresses some struggles and stereotypes as seen in Holyoke, past and present.

Change came in the 1840s as settlers moved in and New England's roads developed. In 1847, a group of investors from Boston purchased land in Ireland Parish and built a canal system that would provide power for dozens of mills. Before Holyoke was incorporated as a city in 1873, Ireland Parish had a cotton mill, a grist mill, a tannery, a clock maker, a quarry, two physicians, a shoemaker, tailor, wheelwright, painter, blacksmith, one school, two churches and a well known but modest tavern.

Immigrants arriving through Ellis Island were carefully tagged with their names and the steamship upon which they arrived. Some of the immigrants to Holyoke in this photo still have tags hanging from them.

By 1870, Holyoke was no longer the agricultural village it had been earlier. The population had increased from 3,245 to 10,733 and it was well on its way to becoming the Paper City. Eleven paper mills employed more than 1,000 workers producing tissue, books, forms and the fine white writing paper that would make the city famous.

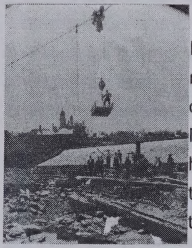
Boston Associates established the Hadley Falls Company and built a wooden dam on the Connecticut River. On November 16, 1848 at 10 am, the gates were closed and the water began to rise. At 3:26 pm, the dam was swept away to the famous words "Dam gone to hell by way of Willimansett." A second wooden dam made with an apron for support, was built in 1849. In 1858, the Holyoke Water Power Company took control of Hadley Falls Company. Holyoke Water Power Company, employing mainly Irish immigrants, began construction on a new and stronger stone dam in the 1890s and finished in 1900. At the same time, mills were being built all around Holyoke.



Irish day laborers provided the first immigrant work force in Holyoke, having arrived in 1847 to dig the canals and construct the new dam and mill buildings. When the cotton mills became operative, many of the laborers and their families stayed in Holyoke and took unskilled jobs in the mills. Of the several hundred first employed in the mills, at least half were Irish, while the remainder were recruited from Ireland Parish and surrounding towns.

The Irish began immigrating to America during the 1820s and by the 1850s the number had grown to almost one million. In addition to the potato famine of 1846, the Irish left their native land for other important reasons. Some were seeking religious freedom and escaped the exploitation of British rule, which included tax collectors and the enforced payment of tithe to a church in whose doctrine they did not believe. In addition to the potato famine of 1846, the Irish left their native land for other important reasons. Some were seeking religious freedom and opposed the implementation of British rule, which included loss of elections and the enforced payment of tithe to a church in whose doctrine they did not believe. Immigrants came from Connaught, County Mayo and County Clare, Dublin, Cork and Kerry counties in Ireland. Pictured here is the McCarthy Family.

After the Irish, the second largest immigrant group into Holyoke was French Canadians, most of whom came from the 1870s to the 1880s. The population in Canada had increased to where cultivatable land could not support the population. Also, American manufacturers paid more than their Canadian counterparts. Early French Canadian immigrants sent back enthusiastic accounts of America along with more money than their families had ever seen.

> The Holyoke Transcript Telegram of April 5, 1873 reported:
> "Frenchmen are coming into town 'thicker and faster and more of 'em' according to the officer stationed at the Connecticut Railroad depot who said there were fresh arrivals with every train."

German families came to Holyoke in the 1860s. They were textile workers from Rhineland and Saxony, highly trained in hand weaving and experienced in making woolens for the German market. With the increasing use of machines to produce woolens in Germany, they sought opportunity for their skills in America. Although represented by only a handful of their countrymen in the 1850s, the flow of German immigrants rapidly increased after 1865. August and Hermann Stursberg, owners of woolen mills in Germany, bought half interest in the Germania Mills. German spinners and weavers found an easy niche in Holyoke because the Stursberg brothers brought them to work and Germans began making a community in South Holyoke.

The first Italians came to Holyoke in the late 1880s. Italians established confectionary and fruit stores between 1882 and 1900. The shops were owned by Rigali, Musante, Campagna, Buglia, Equi, Luchini, Marano. Most stores were on High or Main Street. Frank J. Equi, pictured above in front of his coffee and sandwich shop, on Main Street, was in the business for 80 years. He began working at the shop with his father when he was 16 years old. In 1975, he sold the business to Bernard Cawley of Feeding Hills to continue the restaurant business.

Polish immigration began after the close of the Civil War and the end of the 1863 Polish Revolt for independence. Among the first of the Polish settlers were Czarnecki, Zielinski, Symasko, Szewczynski, Niedzielski, Rutka, Jurasz, Dusza, Swiatek, Slajda, Frodyma. Polish immigrants to Holyoke were mainly young adults, either unmarried or with children too young to work. The one sure place Polish immigrants could find work was the Lyman Mills.

Portuguese immigrants first arrived in Holyoke in the early 1900s, drawn by the work in the textile mills, and at times, to escape an oppressive military draft law in Portugal. Some worked at Mackintosh and Sons Company, Farr Alpaca and at the American Thread Company.

By 1941, the streets downtown were full of first, second or third generation immigrants. Anita Marcotte Healy, French Canadian, remembers that "Main Street was a hustle and bustle place with a good ethnic mixture of businesses- there was a Greek, a Jew, French and Polish. The Irish were mostly up the hill and the Germans on Park

Puerto Ricans are Holyoke's most recent group to enter Holyoke, beginning in the late 1950s. Unlike earlier immigrant groups which came to Holyoke during periods of expanding population and economy, Puerto Ricans migrated to Holyoke when the existing population was decreasing and industrial jobs were harder to find. (Photo taken by Bill Ravanesi)

The company tenements were models for their day. The Holyoke Transcript described a block in South Holyoke as "having a handsome front of pressed brick, double circular windows, three stories high with French roof, and twenty-eight rooms with a dining room, pantries, a kitchen, with most of the rooms finished in oak graining..."

As more immigrants and migrants flooded into Holyoke, the town became a city and industries were popping up all over Holyoke.

DINGLE TOWN

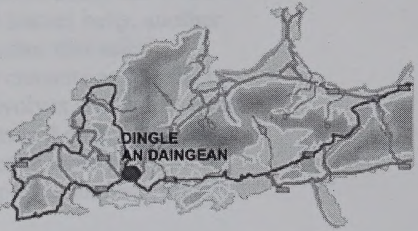
An Daingean



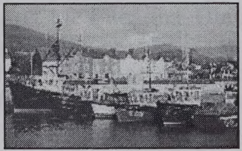
THE TOWN OF DINGLE

Baile an Daingean

An Daingean

Dingle in the Irish language is "Daingean Uí Chúis". "Daingean" means fortress; "Uí Chúis" is generally accepted as translating to Hussey . . . Fortress of Hussey, the Husseys being a Flemish family that came to the area in the 13th Century.

Mountains at its back, Dingle faces comfortably onto a sheltered harbour. From level ground at Strand Street on the harbour's edge and at the Mall beside the Dingle River, three main streets rise: Green Street, John Street and Main Street. About 1,200 people live in Dingle, but it serves the larger population of the surrounding countryside, and in the summer months it caters for many visitors.



Fishing and farming have long been the major industries, but tourism has become an increasingly important business in the town, particularly since the filming of "Ryan's Daughter" in the area in 1969.

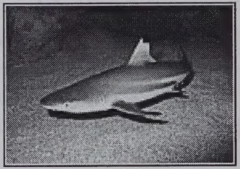
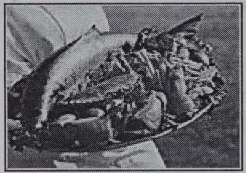
As a market town and fishing port, Dingle has long been well supplied with pubs; in recent years the number has hovered around 52, and the variety is almost as great as the number. There are large, modern pubs and pubs so small that five's a crowd; one that sells wellingtons and leather belts, another that sells sheets and blankets, and another that sells everything from beds and bicycles to creosote and fertiliser. Much of the social life of the town revolves around the pubs: during the winter there are card games and quizzes. In the summer pool tables are removed to leave more room for tourist customers, and Irish music is played almost every night in about ten pubs.

For visitors based in Dingle there is a considerable variety of thing to do, and in planning the day a key consideration will be the weather. The west coast gets a fair amount of rain, but summer showers are usually just that and often pass very quickly. If you are unlucky it may be necessary to adopt the philosophically positive Kerry approach: if it is raining, you say it's a "soft day." Nonetheless, there are now a number of indoor activities for soft days.



The inhabitants and exhibits at Dingle's own aquarium, Oceanworld, will easily entertain and educate you; a cup of coffee or tea and a fresh-baked scone with butter and jam can be enjoyed while reading the day's newspaper or writing postcards at An Cafe Liteartha, Dingle's bookstore cafe; or a bit further afield in Dun Chaoin is The Blasket Centre. In the town there are craft shops and galleries which can be comfortably browsed in whatever the weather.



The town is renowned for its restaurants, most of which offer excellent local seafood. There is a wide variety of restaurants in Dingle, from burgers and chips to pub grub to fine dining. Most places today have several vegetarian selections on their menus.

There are many craft shops in Dingle town. There is good value to be found in the high quality handmade products in the craft shops – woven tweeds and woolen clothing, sweaters, leather goods, jewellery, turned wood, and pottery. There is a craft village, the Ceardlann na Coille located on the road leading west from the pier towards Milltown. There are several art galleries in the town as well, featuring the works of local artists. Most of the shops are well used to packing and shipping their goods, but almost the only place that stamps can be bought is at the Post Office located in the middle of Main Street.

In shopping for everyday requirements, visitors cannot expect to find the range of products available in large city stores; but, that said, there is a very respectable range for a town the size of Dingle. There are three supermarkets, a host of butchers, several small general grocers, and a fruit and veg shop.

Advice and information about accommodation throughout the Peninsula can be obtained at the Tourist Office, located at the Pier. There are three hotels in the town, a number of guesthouses, many bed and breakfasts, and several hostels. During the summer months pressure on accommodation can be considerable and anyone arriving on spec should not leave it till late to go looking.
